

Any code that you write should have a comment that states who wrote it, and who edited it as well as general notes on functionality

I.e. // centers text and changes font color

// written by: Alice

// edited by: Bob

The Information Architecture team will be working on developing the html for the index view while you guys will be working on the styling. You will need to communicate with the architecture team to decide on classes, and ids. Media queries may not be necessary at this point.

The color scheme and general look and feel of the web navigation are below.
